But first, let's answer a couple of FAQs:

FAQ 1: What do aged leads mean?

Aged leads refer to potential customers' contact information that's not brand-new. It's like a treasure trove that's waiting for the right prospector to uncover its hidden gems! Aged leads offer the advantage of cost-effectiveness, as they are typically priced lower than fresh, real-time leads.

FAQ 2: How much does Medicare lead cost?

The cost of Medicare leads can vary widely based on factors such as the type of lead (for instance, Medicare supplement leads vs Medicare advantage leads), how fresh the leads are, and the provider. But remember, with aged leads, you're likely to save more while getting similar high-quality leads.

Now, let's unlock the to converting aged Medicare leads:

1. Understand the Value of Aged Leads

Aged leads offer the most significant value when you realize that only some leads convert immediately. Patience is the key. Insurance products like Medicare Advantage or supplement insurance require understanding and trust-building, which often means the leads need more time. Visit Insurance Journal for insights on the insurance market and lead conversion.

2. Contact Early and Often

Remember, aged leads may not have been contacted for a while. So, dust off those phone numbers and start dialing! While they may be considered “cold leads,” the potential for conversion remains. The initial “no” may turn into a “yes” over time.

3. Offer a Variety of Options

Make sure to limit yourself to a single product. Aged leads can often benefit from a range of insurance products – from life insurance to Medicare Advantage plans. Have a variety of insurance quotes ready to appeal to different needs.
